Colorado City flood dollars: Mohave County Supervisor Gary Watson (right), Dist. 1, presents a check for $24,198 to Colorado City Town Manager David Darger Monday, July 6, at the County Administration Building in Kingman. The Flood Control District funds are appreciated and will be used to help repair “two streets that collect storm drainage,” Darger said. “Our community is very limited on capital improvements. We have a limited tax base. We have some sales tax and we are grateful for that. Our population isn’t enough to make a huge difference as far as state-shared revenues. And, as you know, HURF (Highway User Revenue Funds) have been hit really hard from the state this year. We were hit $220,000 on the heels of about $400,000 last year.” “Every little bit helps,” Watson said. “We are just glad to be of service.”
